

WARSAW HAS NOT FALLEN AS REPORTED

RUSSIANS KNOWN TO BE RETREATING BUT GERMANS HAVE NOT OCCUPIED POLAND'S CAPITAL AS YET.

NO DEFINITE WORD YET

Austrians and Germans Continue to Advance and Threaten the Retreat of the Russ Host in Many Directions.

London, August 2.—No direct news from Warsaw has been received here today. While there are increasing indications that Grand Duke Nicholas is withdrawing his army from the Polish capital, there is evidence that the capital is still in possession of the Russians, since the Petrograd correspondent of the issues of the Monday morning.

That Russia has not abandoned hope of a diversion in the west which may relieve the tremendous pressure exerted upon her by the Austro-German armies, is shown by the announcement at Petrograd that the German forces before Warsaw have been reinforced in the west, thereby "creating favorable conditions." There has been heavy fighting on the Narew river, where the Germans have made some progress in a desperate battle which is raging between the Narew and Oie rivers.

Retreat Reported.

Latest reports from Vienna are that the Russians are retreating further east, pursuing German regiments having passed through Cheim.

At the opening of the Russian duma before a brilliant assembly the ministers in their speeches did not attempt to minimize the gravity of the situation. It all agreed that Russia did not wish the end of her resources. The minister of war summed up this view with the assertion that Russia, perhaps would surrender Warsaw as Moscow was given up in 1812, in order to save final victory.

On the western front artillery duels only marked the operations.

Hospital Burned.

Athens, via London, August 2.—Arriving here from Constantinople report that 3,000 buildings, including the German hospital filled with wounded soldiers, were destroyed last week by fire.

Further Advances.

Milan, August 2.—The capital of the Russian province of Courland, twenty-five miles south of Riga, has been occupied by German troops according to the official statement issued today by German army headquarters.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Kovno, the key to the railway system of northwestern Russia, behind which the Germans are endeavoring to strike the great interior lines, is described as follows in a primer on war geography by the National Geographic society.

Kovno is the central fortress in the Northwestern chain of frontier strongholds. It stands at the confluence of the Niemen and the Viliya rivers, east of central East Prussia. Petrograd lies 350 miles by railroad to the northwest, while behind Kovno and between this fortress and Petrograd, the Russian plain is strewn as thick with lakes as fallow meadow lands with July and August daisies. Mita, Kovno, Grodno and Lemberg lie nearly in the same line, north and south, and Kovno forms the northern terminus of the line of the Bug to which the Russians may retreat, and of which Dytovsk forms the central fortress.

The railway from Bydtkuhnen, East Prussia, to Wilna, runs through Kovno, and at its terminus joins the trunkline between Warsaw and Petrograd, which the Germans are endeavoring to sever. Kovno is a fortress of the first class and has been considerably strengthened in recent years. Its main defense consists of a girdle of eleven forts, surrounding the town in an arc with a radius of about two and one-half miles. The fork of the river junction is an important feature

HESITATES IN ANSWERING U. S. NOTE

GERMAN GOVERNMENT WILL AWAIT AMERICAN NOTE TO ENGLAND BEFORE ARGUING SUBMARINE DETAILS.

MAN SHOT BY GUN; POLICE PROBE CASE

Thomas Caucasian Victim of Wound That May Prove Fatal—Was it Murder?

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Sheboygan, August 2.—Did Thomas Caucasian intend to commit murder last night? That is a question the police are trying to solve.

Caucasian is in the hospital with a bullet wound in his abdomen, which probably will prove fatal.

The shot was fired while George Julius and Peter Marjalis were trying to take the revolver away from Caucasian after he drew the weapon on Jim Marjalis, proprietor of a saloon. Caucasian was employed in the saloon as a cook, and is said to have been drinking and asked for money which was refused him by the proprietor, who said Caucasian had overdrawn his wages.

Caucasian rushed at Marjalis and fired a revolver. Julius and Peter Marjalis grabbed him and tried to get the gun from his hand, when it was discharged. Upon being searched a knife was found in his clothes.

FLAGS ARE TOO SMALL

First German Response Shows Kaiser's Desire to Avoid Attacking American Ships—English Note Arrives.

FLAGS ARE TOO SMALL

Berlin, Aug. 2.—Among the news items prepared today by the Overseas News Agency for transmission for wireless telegraph abroad, was the following:

"Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the German government has not yet decided whether the American note regarding submarine warfare will be answered. The government awaits the details of the announced American note to Great Britain before saying what further steps will be taken."

Flags Too Small.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Germany's first response to the last American note on submarine warfare has come from the admiralty which had requested that American ships had American flags painted on their side, in proportion to the size of the ship, to avoid attacks by submarine commanders. Many American ships have been painting the national colors of their flag, but it is said they were painted too small.

Ambassador Gerard transmitted the request in a message, a part of which is given out by the state department as follows:

"The American ambassador at Berlin has been informed by the German admiralty that merchant vessels wishing to indicate their neutral nationality by painting their national colors on the ship's side, often commit the mistake of painting signs too small so they cannot be recognized at some distance. The foreign office requests American steamship companies to be accordingly informed."

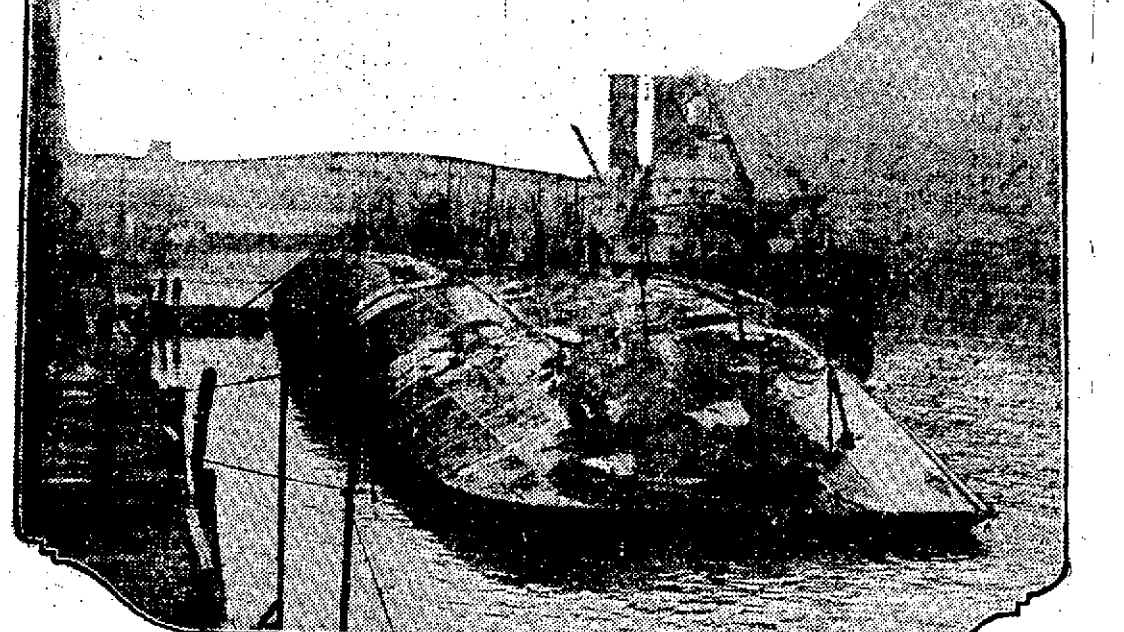

The dispatch brought out no comment in official quarters, but it was claimed that evidence of a desire by Germany to avoid attacks on American ships was gratifying.

English Note.

Great Britain's supplemental note in reply to American representation on interference with neutral shipping, reached the state department today and will be published in Wednesday morning papers with the note received last week on the same subject, and the third note regarding detention of the American steamer, Neches, which also arrived today.

The United States contends that under the treaty with Prussia of 1823 the Frye case should be adjusted through diplomatic channels whereas Germany has held that it was a matter for prize court adjustment. In its last note, the United States asked Germany to reconsider its decision maintaining it would not recognize the prize court ruling as binding.

CARRANZA ARMY AGAIN OCCUPIES MEXICAN CAPITOL

Horrible Scenes Greet Troopers as Mexico City is Occupied Red Cross Wins Washington.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, August 2.—Official confirmation of the re-occupation of Mexico City by Carranza's army under General Gonzalez, reached the state department today from American Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz. A message to the American Red Cross from Mexico City there has been cases of death and collapse from starvation in the capital.

The Red Cross message was from Charles J. O'Connor, the society's relief agent at Mexico City. "Prices already are prohibitive," it said. "There is practically no corn in the city. Authentic cases of death and collapse from starvation. Some people are eating leaves, grass, weeds, dead horses and mules."

Villa Rampant.

El Paso, Texas, August 2.—"The American government can go to hell!" declared General Francisco Villa, addressing a gathering of foreign merchants at Chihuahua City yesterday. Shortly afterward he condemned a number of their stores. Forty-two Mexican merchants were jailed after conference held Saturday for the purpose of raising a forced loan. Six were executed. Such was the substance of reports brought here today from foreign merchants.

BADGER STOCKMEN GET PROMISED AID FOR 'FRISCO FAIR

Senate Has Bill for $5,000 for Exhibit and Governor Philipp Favors Showing Wisconsin Stock.

That Wisconsin stockmen will finally receive $10,000 to aid them in presenting a high class exhibit at the Panama Pacific Exposition now seems certain.

The senate has already passed the bill appropriating $5,000 for this purpose. Governor Philipp is in favor of the measure and it is expected that the assembly will also act favorably upon it. This amount, added to the $5,000 which the Wisconsin Panama Pacific Exposition commission has definitely set aside for a proper Wisconsin livestock exhibit, makes up the $10,000 which the commission originally promised the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association would be available to aid in putting on a first class show.

In 1904 a like amount was expended to send an exhibit to the St. Louis exposition, where expenses were not one-half of those estimated for the Panama Pacific. Wisconsin's live stock industry has developed rapidly in the ten years intervening, too. The sum set aside is entirely too small, considering the cost of sending stock to San Francisco and the magnitude of our live stock industry. However, Badger stockmen have been busily preparing their studs, herds and flocks and are ready to present the best show that ever left the state.

All exhibitors that have not already done so are requested to at once notify the secretary of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association what breed or breeds and how many head they expect to show. This data is necessary in order that the proper committee can arrange the details of transportation, etc.

SAYS PROGRESSIVES WILL FIGHT STRONG FOR 1916 LAURELS

National Committee Chairman Gives Statement Following Canvass of West and the Coast.

Mr. Pleasant, Ia., Aug. 2.—Victor Murdock of Kansas, chairman of the progressive national committee, made the following statement last night.

"I have just completed a three months' personal canvass of the situation with the progressives in the central west and on the Pacific coast, and after making it I am ready to say flat-footedly that we progressives are going into the 1916 fight as a party and to win."

Moreover, a meeting of representative progressives held this month in New York City, reported the same conditions in the east that I have found in the west, and they are lining up for the next battle. This also is the sentiment of the progressive national committee. We will hold our national convention early and nominate a ticket.

The great convention battles of 1916 will not be over candidates, but will be over platforms. The storm will rage, not in the committee of credentials, but in the committee of resolutions. The bourbon republican leadership will not only insist on a standard credit, but will fight for an unqualified and unqualified endorsement of the administration of William Howard Taft, including the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

The democratic leadership likewise will point with pride to the equally lamentable Simmons-Underwood tariff bill, and against a Bryan insurrection of the first magnitude will conduct the one term presidential pledge and other Bryan propaganda; and the progressives will reiterate and re-emphasize their Chicago platform of 1912. That platform remains the only one that has stood the test of the principles of Abraham Lincoln of modern times.

"Both in its protest against the inroads of plutocracy, and in its practical program of concrete economic remedies, the progressive platform has become to hundreds of thousands of aggressive Americans the art of the covenant and there is not a township anywhere without its group of Gittites devoted wholly and solely to its preservation."

The progressives have the right plan for the tariff and other economic issues, including the trust problem. The democratic leadership, after a half century's trial, has signally failed to solve the nation's economic questions. Its tariff law, slammed together under the old logrolling leadership, its utterly unproductive of any better results, previously claimed for it. Its trust legislation founders, its attempts at development of American ocean going craft have fizzled, that the movement of the river is simply evidenced by the tremendous anti-democratic sentiment that has developed at the polls at virtually every election in the last two years. Many of these elections the voter cast a republican ballot because he believed that the republican leadership had learned its lesson and would hereafter, take the progressive path.

"But now the voters know for a certainty that when the republican leadership has been restored to power it has shown more, not less, reaction tendencies, as is notably evidenced by the actions of the legislatures in New York, Ohio and Massachusetts. Hand in hand, with the progressive proposition to encourage social and industrial justice, goes the necessity of solving the great economic problems of the country, not on the basis of political adroitness of which practice the old parties are infamously guilty, but on the basis of service to society."

Everywhere I found these progressives who made the fight of 1912 with that idea uppermost, eager now to continue the fight. Wherever they have had a chance to make good they have.

"The spectacle of republican reaction in New York and Ohio, in contrast to progressive achievement in California, under Governor Johnson, is a dramatic portrayal of the need of the new strong patriotic party of public service. Therefore the progressive will go on with its fight straight out and flat-footed."

EQUILIBRIUM VESSEL TEST IS ORDERED

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE REDFIELD SENDS FOR FIVE PROMINENT INSPECTORS TO BEGIN WORK.

OPERATIONS RESUMED

Employees of Western Electric Company Commence Work After Week's Lapse—Latest Report is 840 Dead.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, August 2.—When the federal grand jury investigating the capsizing of the steamer Eastland convenes this morning, it is expected that before the body some time during the day to tell of the work of the federal steamboat inspection service. Secretary Redfield's board resumed its session, but it was not known what character this inquiry would assume in view of an order by Judge Landis last Saturday of the United States district court, refusing permission to William Nicholas, steamboat inspector, to examine the hull of the Eastland. Secretary Redfield said his investigation would go on in spite of this order.

State's Attorney Hoyne has prepared to present to the county grand jury investigation tending to show the character of men employed as members of the crew of the Eastland. Mr. Hoyne announced he was working in harmony with federal officials.

"Judge Landis, Mr. Cline and I have a perfect understanding," said Mr. Hoyne.

The finding of three more bodies in the hull of the Eastland, lead to renewal of the search today. Several divers were sent into the boat where it was reported a number of bodies were seen but could not be recovered. They were ordered in wire netting, the divers reported.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield said today that an equilibrium test of all passenger-carrying vessels on the Great Lakes would be made and work of steamboat inspectors during the last fifteen years would be investigated.

John A. Cotter of New Orleans; John K. Bolger, San Francisco; H. M. Seeley, New York; Eugene O'Donnell, Boston, all steamboat inspectors, and a fifth inspector to be named later, will be brought here to assist in the work. The investigation of the record of the inspection service will be made by a board on which the traveling inspectors will be represented. It will follow lines suggested by Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, with whose views Mr. Redfield said he was in accord. The sixth session of the federal board of inquiry into the Eastland disaster was held today.

The Western Electric company's plant resumed operations today after a lapse of a week since the disaster of the Eastland. Mourners gathered were removed from the building and only an American flag remained at the plant.

Today's revision of the casualty list, shows 838 identified dead, two unidentified dead, and 140 missing. Of the missing all but two have been accounted for as having perished.

ATTACKS U. S. IN ADDRESS AT 'FRISCO

Dr. Hexamer of Philadelphia Denounces American Government in Present United States-Germany Trouble.

San Francisco, California, Aug. 2.—Hope expressed by a number of delegates that the National German-American Alliance, which convenes here today, would make no formal declaration of its attitude toward the controversy in which the United States and Germany is now engaged, has diminished, it was said today, as result of vigorous statements made on the American government in an address yesterday by organization president Dr. C. J. Hexamer, Philadelphia. Delegates in favor of a strong stand by the convention asserted that Dr. Hexamer's denunciation of the United States for permitting shipment of war supplies to England paved the way for resolutions covering the same ground.

Members of the opposition, however, declared they would make every effort to prevent such resolutions being acted upon. President Hexamer's report is to be read today.

TOMATO IS PRODUCT OF SHORES OF U. S. SCIENTIST RELATES

Pan American Bulletin Tells of Oth. Products Discovery of America Gave to Humanity.

Excepting our scientists, there are comparatively few people in this country who ever stop to think of how many important products that now minister to the health, sustenance, and pleasure of mankind, were added to the world's supply by the discovery of America. A few of these of incidentally mentioned in an interesting article on "The Tomato," in the current number of The Bulletin of the Pan American Union, by Edwin Albee, who writes:

"The greatest febrile known to day—quinine—came into existence because the Incas of Peru had discovered the medicinal properties of the bark of the cinchona tree; the leaves of the coca plant, a South American product, have served to alleviate pain all over the world by their essence—cocaine. Indian corn or maize, was unknown to the Old World before it was found to be the great food staple of the Americans; Irish as well as sweet potatoes had their first home in the New World; the delicious confection by the Incas of Peru and the Aztecs of Mexico before the Spaniards found it in these countries and introduced it into Europe; tobacco, whose great aromatic smoke now circumscribes the earth, was added to man's pleasures by the Indians of America. Many other products might be enumerated, but among them all perhaps none ministers more delightfully to the palate of the modern epicure than does the tomato, that luscious, succulent, refreshing vegetable-fruit which gratifies the eye with its beauty of color and form, stills hunger with its piquant, and assuages thirst with its juice.

The name "tomato" seems to be of Aztec origin, given as tomatl by some authorities and as tomate by others, and still persists in some few of the older Mexican town names, such as Amatlan, Tomatepeque, etc., but the general consensus of opinion among botanists seems to be that the plant and its culture for edible purposes originated in Peru, whence it spread to other sections of the Americas. It is certain, at any rate, that it was known and cultivated for its fruit centuries before the Columbian discovery.

That the cultivated tomato was known to some of the European botanists over 300 years ago is evidenced by the fact that two large varieties were described by Matthioli as early as 1554, but for many years it was only in southern Europe that the value of the fruit for use in soups and as a salad was recognized. It was quite generally used in Spain and Italy during the 17th century, but in England and in northern Europe generally the plant was grown only in botanical gardens as a curiosity and for ornamental purposes. It was seldom eaten, being commonly regard-as unhealthy and even poisonous. This belief probably arose because of the close resemblance of the plant to its allied relative, the nightshade, or belladonna, and had, of course, no foundation in fact. It was not until the early part of the 18th century that the tomato came into general use as a food in northern Europe and even in the United States. Since about 1835, however, the use and cultivation of the vegetable has grown to such an extent that it has now become one of the most important of our garden crops.

When a successful process of canning the fruit was evolved the tomato industry at once assumed large proportions. It was found that for all cooking purposes the canned fruit was as good as that fresh from the vine, and as a result the tomato has become a staple food the year round, and millions of dollars are now invested in canning factories in the United States, whose chief output consists of tomatoes. From statistics compiled by the National Canners' association for the year 1914 it is learned that among the tomato-producing states Maryland ranked first with a production of 5,850,000 cases of cans, followed by California with 1,350,000 cases; Indiana third with 1,295,000 cases. The total production for the whole country amounted to 15,222,000 cases of tomatoes and about 5,000,000 cases of tomato pulp (used in making catsup, sauces, soups, etc.). The total was therefore over 20,000,000 cases of 24 two-pound cans each, or an output of 480,000 cans, weighing approximately $28,000,000. These cans were placed one on top of the other, the resulting column would be very nearly 37,000 miles high, or if placed end to end in a row would encircle the earth one and a half times at the equator. These figures deal only with the canned product of factories keeping accurate statistics. When we remember that perhaps twice as many more are eaten raw and canned by the thrifty housewives and girls' Canning clubs, we may get some idea of the importance in our national economy of the garden tomato.

HARVEST DISEASE IS DUE TO JIGGER HEALTH BODY SAYS

Writer for Public Health Organization Traces Summer Complaint to Little Insect.

Although of brief duration, the harvest disease, as it is commonly known, is one of the most annoying and troublesome complaints of the summer season. It is of frequent occurrence, seldom recognized, and widely disseminated. The disease is generally ascribed to errors of diet, over-exertion or poisoning, and but few of the afflicted are aware that the cause of their suffering is a minute six-legged insect.

The "jigger," "chigger," or harvest mite, which occasions this vexatious summer eruption, belongs to the mite family. This in itself is sufficient to cause some doubt in the minds of the uninitiated, inasmuch as several other members of the family have gained fame through misbehavior. The itch mite is a notorious example. It has been with us since history began and still afflicts the human race. The straw mite, only recently discovered, is also acquiring somewhat of a reputation.

The adult jigger is harmless. It apparently loves the freedom of the woods and open fields, attaching itself to leaves and grasses and mites ignoring all human intruders. The young are hatched in July and August and appear from the eggs as minute orange-red larvae. For some inexplicable reason they show a considerable predilection for human society, willingly forsaking their natural habitat for the uncertainties of life with man. When lodged upon the skin they immediately select a favorable site and rapidly begin to penetrate the outer layers by burrowing.

The trouble begins at this stage. The irritation, at first mild, becomes intense as the burrowing proceeds and is accompanied by redness, swelling and inflammation. Frequently the eruption resembles that of hives or even eczema and the itching is so severe that lesions due to violent scratching may ensue. The irritation may be confined to particular portions of the body or become widespread. Depending upon the number of larvae entrenching themselves, the suffering may be acute, preventing sleep and even leading to other disturbances, while at the best the degree of discomfort is such as to demand remedial measures. Just why the larvae exhibit burrowing propensities in this manner is unknown; their action is apparently without reason as they invariably perish within a few days after commencing their nefarious attack. Their demise is most welcome to the sufferer. As with other parasitic diseases, the susceptibility of individuals varies considerably, some persons not suffering even when thoroughly exposed.

Early treatment of jigger rash or trombidiosis, as it is known, is essential. If the condition is recognized at its onset the sufferer can almost invariably point with exactness to the burrowing site and frequently the disappearing extremities of the intruders may be observed. A needle, sterilized by boiling, may be used to pluck the invaders from their dermal incrustations, and even if the search proves unsuccessful, the counter-irritation produced by the instrument is pleasurable, and affords great enjoyment to the afflicted. If the swelling or oedema of the skin is considerable, or if the lesions are not recent, search will prove futile as the larvae are already safely buried. One can then only wait for an early termination of their activities, this usually requiring from five to seven days. Several extremely useful preparations are prescribed by physicians, not only to kill the mites, but to reduce the irritation and relieve the itching. Batching directly after exposure is advisable in order to drown the parasites. The best treatment is, however, the avoidance of the haunts of the tormentors.

Geographic Society's War Primer

Washington, Aug. 2.—Through the government of Lomzha, where the right wing of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army began its battles for Warsaw and the way beyond the Bug, the battle tide has ebbed and flowed in decisive waves since the war's outbreak. From this northeastern corner of Russian Poland, the forces of the Tsar smashed their way deep into East Prussia, and they were driven back this way by the re-enforced Germans upon their fortresses of Osoviec, Kolno and Ostrolenka. The ground in the north of the government has been fought over a number of times, and just recently have the Germans swept over the first line of defenses toward the southwest and the southeast, a desperate battle of this interesting battle amphitheatre has been prepared by the National Geographic society. It is as follows:

The government of Lomzha is one of the greatest regions in Russian Poland. Extensive marshes spread over much of its area, particularly following the banks of the Narw river, as it winds its way southward, its course confining with the Vistula north of Warsaw. The Bug forms the southern boundary of the government, and is one of the last obstacles to a march on Warsaw from the north. In parts of its course, the banks of the Bug are worn in deep terraces, and, likewise, the bed of the Narw is cut so deep in parts as to give the country a hilly appearance. Clays, wire-grass tufted swamps fill in much of the monotonous picture of this region with dingy rust and brown.

Just to the north of the government lies the Masurian lake region of East Prussia. The same stinging, moist cold, the same leaden skies, and the same hot, breathless summers hang over the Polish districts as those found in the German provinces. The winters here are the bitter winters of the Russian plain, where the snow crystals snap and crack like powdered ice under sleigh runners, or heavy boots. The cold and northern storms set in about the middle of November.

The government is primarily agricultural. It has an area of 4,869 square miles, much of which is taken up by grain, potato, fibre and stock farms. The chief crops are rye, oats, wheat, barley, buckwheat, peas, potatoes, flax and hemp. The potato crop is used in part for the manufacture of alcohol. This is carried on in numerous distilleries within the government. The flax and hemp are most of them used in the factories in the factories of Lodz, and in export.

Geese, probably the distinctive product of Russian Poland, and one which, in the past, has taken a valuable part in supplying the German empire with its untold tons of goose-flesh and its acres of goosefeather bedding, are found in countless herds, and grayish, undulating except in stretches in the north and southwest. Except for river crossing and forest belts, it is open for the passage of troops. Its roads, as are all roads in Poland and in Russia, are very bad in the east of the government and stretching away to the fortress of Osoviec in the government of Grodno are heavy forest tracts. There are no rail communications in the government except that which connects the fortress Ostrolenka with the main line between Warsaw, Grodno and Vilna.

"The country in the Lomzha government is mostly flat, monotonous, or slightly undulating except in stretches in the north and southwest. Except for river crossing and forest belts, it is open for the passage of troops. Its roads, as are all roads in Poland and in Russia, are very bad in the east of the government and stretching away to the fortress of Osoviec in the government of Grodno are heavy forest tracts. There are no rail communications in the government except that which connects the fortress Ostrolenka with the main line between Warsaw, Grodno and Vilna."

HAITI'S LATEST MOVE.

Today's dispatches announce that France has asked permission of the United States to land marines to protect its interests in Haiti. This means that Europe recognizes that it is up to Uncle Sam to bring about peace to the troubled republic. The Christian Science Monitor calls attention to the latest trouble in the following well-modulated editorial when it says:

"After President Guillaume Sam we see only Rouvalle Ebo as leading influence in the Haitian republic, which its European creditors are pressing for settlement of debts. Accompanied by acts such as before have been committed by Haitians when in a destructive mood, power has passed for a brief time from one man to another, and this by use of authority exerted in its most passionate forms. No large policy of state has been fought for or sacrificed for. Personal and factional interests have evidently controlled both victors and vanquished. As of old in the history of the republic the barbarism and selfishness so often characteristic of insular politics has been shown. A change in a figurehead has been made but no manifest advance in popular government is registered. Nominally a republic, the state is virtually an autocracy that states on revolution, presidential tyranny having its roots in civil factional and personal covetousness and with tenure of place as tyrant conditioned by skill in placating subordinates with pelf and in fighting rivals with arms.

"The United States is not without competent protectors to its interests in Haiti at this time, for it has seen this period of revolution gaining in breadth and depth and has foreseen the downfall of President Sam. What the United States would like to do, and what the new leadership of Haiti may perhaps thwart for a time, since it is anti-American, is to obtain the consent of Haiti to some such form of relationship and fiscal alliance as exists between Santo Domingo and the United States. Once conceded it would rehabilitate credit, it would meet the reasonable wishes of European creditors, it would stabilize internal administration of the island, and it would formally define a policy which it is well for the United States to make permanent if possible, as it goes on developing its trade and its military aims in and around the Caribbean sea.

"Sooner or later, no doubt, after the costs of incessant revolutions have had their effect, the Haitians will voluntarily seek the kind of service from the United States that is now being given to Dominicans. The United States, on its part, some day, patience being severely taxed, will perhaps do for Haiti what it has done for Cuba, Porto Rico and Santo Domingo. It may be forced to annex the island, but it will much prefer to live and let live, if thereby it can induce the Haitians to submit to an educational process which, they greatly need before they are entrusted with full responsibility for national government at a time when statecraft is being disclosed as an affair quite unsuited for amateurs and self-seekers to manage."

THE YEAR'S TOLL.

The terrible loss of life and property that marks the closing of the first year of the war of ages, leaves in its wake a terrible loss of life and the destruction of millions of dollars worth of property. Nor does the war look to be near an end yet. True, the German forces have invaded Russia and on the eastern front. The Turks still hold Constantinople. Austria does not appear to have reached the end of its resources, even though ringed around with foes armed with neutrals. Italy has gone slowly forward invading Austrian territory, gaining small victories, but the results are not what was expected. In the west the armies of England, Belgium and France have managed to hold their line of trenches they have maintained for almost eleven months past at terrible loss of life. The German drive on Paris has failed although all but a small corner of Belgium is in their hands. They have not reached the channel and are not yet in a position to make their own terms of peace. What may happen when the armies now engaged in the Russian drive are released is hard to say. England has not met the expectations of its warmest supporters and the brunt of the western fighting has been maintained by France. Thus far Greece, Rumania, Bulgaria, Holland, Sweden and Norway, as well as Switzerland have been able to keep clear of the conflict, but all the world is seriously affected and the first anniversary of the start of this useless struggle sees every Christian nation on the globe the sufferer to more or less an extent.

FIGHT UNDER ORDERS.

The "allies" of the senate, composed of a few democrats, the La Follette and McGovern republicans, the socialists and a few renegade conservatives, all united under one banner of the "tax-cutters" are fighting under orders to supply campaign documents for the next state battle for supremacy by opposing the cut in the appropriation budgets. The assembly is doing yeoman work in this direction. Led by L. C. Whitte, hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been lopped off from appropriation bills and saved to the taxpayers. The senate if it resents this cut, it will not give them the war cry of "No reduction of taxes." They need an issue and they are listening to the voice of their "Master" who appreciates that in his next campaign for return to the United States senate he is going to have the real battle of his life and he must have all the campaign ammunition possible. Governor Phillips is waging the battle for the people of the state. For the men who had confidence in him and elected him to the office of governor. He is much in earnest in his determination to reduce taxes if possible, cut down state expenses, and give the state a business administration. It is to be hoped that he may succeed. It is hoped that his efforts in behalf of the taxpayers will be successful in the end. Meantime the bitter warfare wages and the senate is the stumbling block and the one where the responsibility must be placed if the plans miscarry.

FAIR PROSPECTS.

Indications are that if the weather man decides upon pleasant weather for the week of the Janesville fair, one of the finest displays in all branches of county activities will be assembled at the Park association grounds, that has been brought together in many years. Friday, August 13th, has been designated as Janesville and Edgerton day. It is to be hoped the business men of the city will see fit to declare it a half holiday and close their stores at noon so that all residents of the city may have an opportunity of visiting the fair grounds and enjoying the various displays and witnessing the horse racing which promises to be most excellent. The grounds are being put in first-class condition and everything points to a most successful fair—if the weather man is kind.

The question has been raised whether the United States government is making any plans to start a gopher wood industry in this country. If the present rains keep on it would look as though we had all better follow Admiral Noah's example and start building a few arks.

Secretary Redfield is one great little half candlepower investigator. The Chicago press is urgent in demand that Wilson punish his subordinate for his ill-timed interference in the investigation of the Eastland disaster.

This is fine weather for completing road improvements. No use to complain. The street department heads are doing enough sweating to make up for any waste of energy on the part of the ordinary citizen.

Warsaw is about ready to display the old, familiar sign, "This place has changed hands. After complete renovation it will open under a new management."

Thus far ducks and geese have made no complaint against the July weather. While the chickens and turkeys may have voiced opposition it has not counted.

Summer cottages are a drug on the market this year. But never mind, it will be warm enough in September to make up for it all.

Haiti is seeking to make the Mexican revolution appear as a well ordered affair, a pink tea affair as it were.

Japan appears to be indulging in a graft scandal just the same as a lot of other civilized nations do.

It does not take much of a calendar-maker to predict rain these summer days.

Emperor William will soon be presenting Poland to the Poles after all.

SNAP SHOTS

In a Missouri community the real leader of society is the man who owns the best coon dog.

When a boy wears long curls it is a sign the boy's father is the junior member of the firm.

At least this may be said for the practice of breeding jangling pigeons: it is a perfectly harmless form of useless endeavor.

Here is another inviolable rule: A man with grease-spots on his vest should not wear a carnation in his buttonhole.

The average man enjoys no theory so much as the one that plenty of money enables a criminal to escape justice.

The trouble with the man who wears a diamond ring is that he is apt to stage it badly.

Polltense dictates more laughter than perception.

A Kansas newspaper says the country is watching Kansas. You can play that either way, but hysteria always attracts more attention than keen common sense.

The trouble with a political meeting is that only those who have been converted attend the services.

Unless you are a Knight of Pythias, it no longer is good form to wear a willow plume on your hat.

"Well," said Helen of Troy, "who let you in?"

"Up the census taker," explained the man with the note book. "According to the royal decree I am not to be denied admittance anywhere."

"Oh, well, fire away," said the fair Helen languidly. (See Bosworth Pythe's "Derivations of Modern Slang.")

The census taker proceeded to do his duty, and after the lovely Helen had answered questions concerning her color, weight, disposition and previous condition of her teeth, the census taker said, "And how—how old do you happen to be at the moment?"

"Elegant weather we're having," said Helen sweetly.

"Scrumptious. How old did you say?"

"Do you want to see my vaccination?" asked the beautiful creature, and showed it to him high up on her arm.

The charmed and dazzled census taker loosened the neck of his toga and asked weakly, "When were you born, if you don't mind?"

"Now's this for an imitation of Valerius Junius," queried the woman of destiny, and struck a pose the symmetrical charm of which was never equaled on the most exquisitely sculptured vase, and while the dazzled minion of the state was still in a half-conscious trance, she showed him the wax out.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Their Social Standing Is Still In Doubt—

The Ball of Fire

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester

Illustrated by C. D. Rhodes

(Copyright, 1914, by the Red Book Corporation)

Mrs. Davies' left her flutter immediately. This was too stupendously serious a matter to be weakly treated. "My dear, you don't understand!" she protested, not in anger, but in patient reason. "Houston Van Ploon has been the unattainable match of New York. He is a gentleman in every particular, a desirable young man in every respect, and gifted with everything a young girl would want. He has so much money that you could buy a kingdom and be a queen, if you chose to amuse yourself that way. He has a dignified old family, which makes mere social position seem like an ignominious scramble for cotton-pick favors; and it is universally admitted that he is the most perfect of all the Van Ploons for many generations. Not exceptionally clever; but that is one of the reasons the Van Ploons are so particular to find a suitable matrimonial alliance for him."

Gail, nibbling daintily at her chocolate, closed her eyelids for a second, the long, brown lashes curved down on her cheeks, and from beneath them there escaped a sparkle like the snap of live coals, while the corners of her lips twitched in that little smile which she kept for her own enjoyment.

"You cannot appreciate the compliment which has been paid you, Gail. Every debutante for the past five years has been most carefully considered by the Van Ploons, and I sincerely believe this to be the first time they have unanimously agreed on a choice. It is a matter of eugenics, Gail, but in addition to that, Mr. Van Ploon assures me that Houston is most fervently interested."

"How careless of them," criticized Gail. "They have neither asked for my measurements nor examined my teeth."

"Gail!" Her chaperon and sponsor was both shocked and stern. "I positively decline to even discuss the Van Ploon eugenics," stated Gail, pushing aside her chocolates, while a red spot began to appear on her cheeks. "I shall not, as I stated before, be at home to Houston Van Ploon this evening—or any other evening."

"I shall not deliver that message," announced Mrs. Davies, setting her lips. "As your present sponsor, I shall insist that you take more time to consider a matter so important."

"I shall insist on refusing to consider it for one second," returned Gail. "I am very fond of Houston Van Ploon, and I hope to remain so, but I wouldn't marry him under any circumstances. This is firm, flat, and final."

Mrs. Helen Davies dropped patient reason instantly. She was aware of an impulsive wish that Gail were in pinafores, and her own child, so she could box her ears.

"Gail, you compel me to lose my patience!" she declared. "When you came, I strained every influence I possessed to have you meet the most desirable eligibles this big city could offer, just as if you were my own daughter! I have succeeded in working miracles! I have given you an opportunity to interest the very best! You have interested them, but I have never seen such extravagance in the waste of opportunities! You have refused men whom thousands in the highest circles have sought; and now you refuse the very choice of them all! What or whom do you want?"

Gail's red spots were deepening, but she only clasped her knee in her interlocked fingers, her brown hair waving about her face, and her chin uplifted.

"You can't always expect to retain your youth and beauty and charm!" went on her Aunt Helen. "You can't expect to come to New York every year and look over the eligibles until you find one to suit your fastidious taste! You're capricious, you're ungrateful, and you're unsatisfactory!"

Gail's eyes turned suddenly moist, and the red flushed out of her cheeks. "Oh, Aunt Helen!" she exclaimed in instant contrition. "I'm so very, very sorry that I am such a disappointment to you! But if I just can't marry Mr. Van Ploon, I can't, can I? Don't you see?"

"She was up now, and down again, sitting on a hassock in front of Mrs. Davies, and the face which she upturned had in it so much of beautiful appeal that even her chaperon and sponsor was softened. "I was nasty a while ago, and I had no excuse for it, for you have been loving and sincere in your desire to make my future happy. I'm so very, very sorry! I'll tell you what I'll do! You may go down and tell Mr. Van Ploon and his daughter that I will see Houston this evening, and then she smiled; "but you mustn't say, 'with pleasure.'"

The soft air which blew upon Gail's cheek was like the first breath of spring, and there was the far-off prophecy of awakening in the very sunshine, as she sped out the river road with Allison in his powerful runabout. "It's glorious!" exclaimed Gail, her cheeks answering to the caress of the air with a flush of blossomlike delicacy. She was particularly contented today. Allison had been so busy of late, and she had missed him. With all his strength, he was restless.

"I feel like a new man at this time of the year," returned Allison, glancing at Gail with cool appreciation. A car full of men passed them, and the looks they cast in his runabout pleased him. "Gail, do you remember the first time we drove out here?"

"Indeed yes," she laughed. "With the snow in our eyes, and the roads all white, with the lights gleaming through the flakes like arctic will-o'-the-wisps. We ran away that night, and dined at Roseleaf Inn, and worried the folks to death, for fear we had had an accident."

"I had more than an accident that night," said Allison. "I had a total wreck."

Gail glanced at him quickly, but his face was clear of any apparent purpose. He was gazing straight ahead, his clean-cut profile, always a pleasant thing to look upon, set against the shifting background of rocky banks as if it were the one, steadfast and unalterable thing in the universe; and he was smiling introspectively.

"It was about here that it happened," he went on. "I think I'd been bragging a little, and I think you meant to slyly prick my balloon, which I will admit seemed a kind and charitable thing to do."

"What was it?" wondered Gail, trying to recall that unimportant conversation.

"Oh, a gentle intimation that I hadn't done so much," he laughed. "I had just finished consolidating all the traction cars in New York, subways, L's, and surface; and I felt cocky about it. I even remarked that I had achieved the dream of my life, and intended to rest a while. All you said was, 'Why?' and his laugh pealed out. 'I used to be conspicuous for impertinence,' smiled Gail. 'I'm trying to reform.'"

"I'm glad you hadn't started when I met you," returned Allison, steering around a sharp stone with the firm accuracy which Gail had so often admired. "I never had so stinging a reproof as that little why. It did me more good than any sermon I ever heard."

Gail looked at him in questioning perplexity. She could not gather what he meant, but she had a sense of something big, and once more she was impressed with the tremendous reserve force in the man. His clear gray eyes were fixed on the road ahead, and the very symbol of him seemed to be this driving, top speed, a long road, a steady hand, a cool determination, a sublime disregard of hills and valleys which made them all a level road. "Why? That word set me out on a new principle that never, while I had strength in me, would I consider my work finished, no matter how great an achievement I had made. I am still at work."

Something within her leaped up in answer to the thrill of exultation in his voice. To have been the inspiration of great deeds, even by so simple an agency as the accidental use of a word, was in itself an exalting thing, though an humbling one, too. And there were great deeds. She was sure of that as she looked at him.

"When I was a boy I lived on ancient history," he went on, with a smile for the bygone dreamer he had been. "I wanted to be a soldier, a great general, a warrior, in the sturdy old sense, and my one hero was Alexander the Great, because he conquered the world! That's what I wanted to do. When I grew older, and found how small was the world which Alexander had conquered, not much bigger than the original thirteen states, I grew rather disillusioned, particularly as I was working at about that time for a dollar and a quarter a day. I spent a few busy years, and had forgotten the dream; then you said 'why' and it all came back."

"Hurry!" commanded Gail. "Curiosity is bad for me."

"Let me build it up, step by step, for you. Incidentally, I'll give you some confidential news which you will be reading in months to come. I hope," and he laughed, "that you will not tell your friends the reporters about it."

"Cross my heart, I won't," she gayly replied. The sting of her one big newspaper experience had begun to die away.

"When you asked me why, I was trying to secure Vedder court for a terminal station for my city traction lines. Vedder court quickly became, in my imagination, the terminal point not only of the city traction lines, but of the world's transportation. From that I would run a railroad tube to the mainland, so that I could land passengers, not only in the heart of New York, but at the platforms of every street car and L and subway train."

"How wonderful!" exclaimed Gail, in enthusiasm. "This was an idea she could grasp. 'And have you secured Vedder court?'"

"It's a matter of days," he returned carelessly. "The next step was the transcontinental line. I built it up, piece by piece, and today, under my own personal control, with sufficient stock to elect my own directors, who will jump when I crack the whip, I possess a railroad line from the Atlantic to the Pacific so direct, so straight, and so allied with ninety-five per cent of the freight interests of the United States that, within two years, there will not be a car wheel turning in America which does not do so at the command of the A-P. railroad. That is the first step leading out of Vedder court. The news of that consolidation will be in tomorrow morning's papers, and from that minute on, the water will begin to drip from railroad stocks."

"How about Uncle Jim's road?" Gail suddenly interrupted.

"I am taking care of him," he told her easily. "From Vedder court run subways along the docks."

"I see!" interrupted Gail. "You have secured control of the steamship companies, of the foreign railroads, of everything which hauls and carries! 'Airships excepted,' he laughingly informed her.

still to center more and more the fruits of that dreaming within his own eager hand.

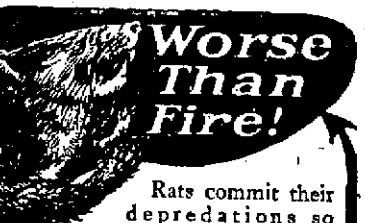

Roseleaf Inn, Gail recognized it with a smile as they turned in at the drive. She was glad that they had come here, for it was linked in her mind with the beginning of that great project of which she had been the impulse, and in which the thing in her that had been denied opportunity because she was a woman, claimed a hungry share. At his suggestion—it was more like a command, but she scarcely noticed—she telephoned that she was going to remain to dinner with Allison; and then they enjoyed a two-hour chat of many things, trivial in themselves, but fraught now with delightful meaning, because they had to think on so many unexpressed things, larger than these idle people about them could conceive, or grasp if they knew.

Homeward again in the starlit night, still in that whirl of exultation. It was somewhat chillier now, and Allison bundled her into the machine with rough tenderness. She felt the thrill of him as he sat beside her, and the firm strength with which he controlled the swiftly speeding runabout, was part her strength. They were kindred spirits, these two, soaring above the affairs of earth in the serene complacency of those who make thieves of vastness itself. They did not talk much, for they had not much to talk about. The details of a scheme so comprehensive as Allison's were not things to be explained, they were things to be seen in a vision. Once she asked him about the bringing of the foreign railroads into the combination, and he told her that this would only be accomplished by a political upheaval, which would take place next month, and would probably involve the whole of Europe. It was another detail; and it seemed quite natural. She was so interested that he told her all about his foreign visitors.

Dinner Stories

"Did you kill the moths with the moth balls I recommended?" asked the druggist. "No, I didn't," said the customer truculently. "I sat up all night and didn't hit a single moth."

Her son had enlisted and she was a proud old woman as she harangued a knot of friends on the village street.

"Garge always done 'is duty by me, 'ens, an' now 'e's doing 'is duty by king an' country," she said. "I feel right down sorry for them Germans to think of 'im going into battle with 'is rifle in 'is 'and and 'is a Long Way to Tipperary on 'is lips. 'Our Germans, indeed!" exclaimed one of the audience. "Fitz 'is wasted on 'em! Fraps you 'avent 'eard of 'is cruelties?"

"Fraps 'is 'avent," agreed the old lady. "An' fraps you 'avent 'eard Garge sing."

Jasper was a negro servant, long in the employ of the family, and his troubles were related to them with childish simplicity and trust. One morning he sought out the master of the house and said:

"Marse John, dey had me up befoah ma church las' night fur tago in."

"Well," he replied, "I don't suppose you were guilty—were you Jasper?"

"Yas, suh; yas suh; I wuz guilty, and dey proved it on me, too; but I come out ob 'it all clean, suh. Ma frien's stuck to me close; an' after den other nights done testified ag'in me, ma frien's all got up and testified dat I had tangoed, but I wuz so drunk at de time I didn't know what I wuz doin'. So I come out all clean—an' de preacher scused me."

At least one little girl in New York is in line for a diplomatic position when the government decides to admit feminine aspirants to the corps. She was sitting on a park bench the other afternoon, in company with another child about her own age. There was evidently some disagreement between them, and suddenly the discreet maiden turned to her obnoxious companion, smiled sweetly, and said: "Well, if one of us should get off this seat, I'd have more room."

The Bore.

Some student of the relatively unimportant but nevertheless entertaining side lines of literary history has been investigating the origin of the term by which we characterize the man who habitually blockades the channels of agreeable human intercourse. He has decided that the word "bore" made its first appearance in the letters of Lord Carlisle and of Selwyn, but that they used it with reference not to a creature, but to a state or condition.
Thus in 1787 Carlisle wrote: "I enclose a package of letters, which, if they are French, the Lord deliver you from the bore." It was not until the beginning of the last century that the word was applied to the person who wears and worries.—Boston Herald.

Why Steam Casts a Shadow.

Why does steam cast no shadow, while steam, which is invisible, does cast a shadow? Pure water in a state of rest is of uniform density, and the rays of light, although they may be re-fracted, pass through it almost unimpeded in parallel lines. Steam is composed of vapor of different degrees of density, intermingled usually with some air, so that the rays of light entering it are not uniformly refracted and therefore interfere with and neutralize each other to a considerable degree, as counter or cross waves strike each other down and tend to create a smooth sea.—Chicago Herald.
